“Her father was definitely in a good mood. He was enjoying her mother’s company. A big smile escaped onto Maeve’s face.”

-Freaked Out p. 84

Maeve watches her divorced parents spend a pleasant time together at the Tae Kwon Do performance. Maeve is happy about their flirtatious behavior towards one another. Can they be a family again?

Do you believe Maeve is holding out false hopes of her parents getting together again?

Do you think Maeve’s parents are good parents even if they are not living together?

Do you think that parents who cannot live harmoniously together should separate or divorce, or should they stay together anyway?
